Solving Behaviours of Concern: A Practical Education Program

Have you ever experienced a person with dementia calling out for help or shouting at you for no apparent reason? Perhaps you have been subject to aggressive behaviour or accused of stealing from a resident.

Dissolving Difficult Behaviour is a six module program enabling participants to learn how to identify the unmet needs behind behaviours of concern and how to meet these specific needs in a meaningful and lasting way.

The precise abilities learnt during the education can be implemented straight away with instant results. Because each person can experience that these strategies genuinely work, they feel confident in applying the new skill-sets in practice.

Featuring the Founder of the Spark of Life Philosophy, Jane Verity, the program explores how communication and relationships can be positively transformed to prevent and solve behaviours of concern, thus preventing the use of psychotropic medications.

The program features six 30 minute DVD modules for in-service education.

In addition, the accompanying handbook, How to Dissolve Difficult Behaviour has clear and easy guidance to understand and facilitate solutions to common challenges.
